AIDA - Association Internationale de Droit des Assurances

Insurance law is woven into the very fabric of insurance.

From incumbents, start-ups, disrupters, regulators, insurers, reinsurers and industry service providers, insurance law is a cog in the wheel that cannot be overlooked. Ignore the law and its impact on policies, procedures and claims and you will end up in strife.

The International Insurance Law Association (AIDA – Association Internationale de Droit des Assurances) was formed on 28 April 1960 in Luxembourg, its aim was to promote collaboration among its members and friends to increase the study, knowledge and debate of international and national insurance law and related matters.

It's not just for insurance lawyers. While private practice lawyers form a significant part of AIDA's membership base, and provide some of the unique value proposition including their intellectual property and knowledge, AIDA members and friends are from all roles and all sectors of the insurance industry.

AIDA's DNA is its ability to harness and crystallise legal thought and opinion that everyone in the insurance community can use in their daily activities.

It is at the forefront of industry innovation – alerting members around the world to future trends in the industry. It has a strong focus on developing young professionals who will be the industry's future leaders.

AIDA has 58 national chapters across the globe, including our own Chapter for Australia - AILA, which was formed in 1983 after the AIDA Presidential Council invited Michael Gill and John Hastings to form the antipodean arm.

The current AIDA Presidential Council representative for AILA is Chris Rodd.
