Kaho Naa... Pyaar Hai (Say It... You're In Love) is a 2000 Indian Hindi-language musical romantic thriller film written, directed and produced by Rakesh Roshan. It marks the debut of his son Hrithik Roshan and fellow actress Ameesha Patel. Upon its release on 14 January 2000, the film along with Hrithik Roshan's debut act and the soundtrack album became an instant sensational blockbuster success. It earned over ₹800 million (US$17.8 million) worldwide, becoming the second highest-grossing film of 2000 worldwide and the highest net domestically grossing movie in India of the Year.

The film received positive reviews from critics, with particular praise directed towards Hrithik's performance, dancing skills, physique and looks, and the soundtrack. However, most critics also criticized the film's "clichéd" storyline. Hrithik became an overnight superstar. His debut was termed "Hrithik Mania" by the media, and he has been known as the "Millennial Superstar" ever since.

Kaho Naa... Pyaar Hai went on to be inducted into the Guinness World Records (2002) for being a feature film with the most awards won a total of 92 awards received in numerous ceremonies and categories. Likewise, the film would be added to the Limca Book of Records (2003) for the greatest number of awards won by a Bollywood film. As director and producer, Rakesh Roshan collected his first ever Filmfare Award, while his son became the only actor ever to win both the Filmfare Award for Best Actor and the Filmfare Award for Best Debut for the same film. The core concept of the movie was inspired by the 1986 Kannada movie Ratha Saphami, and the 1996 Tamil film Love Birds.

Following the success of Kaho Naa... Pyaar Hai, the father-son duo have gone on to collaborate in many more films, including Koi... Mil Gaya (2003), Krrish (2006), Kites (2010), Krrish 3 (2013), and Kaabil (2017).

SYNOPSIS: Rohit and his younger brother Amit are orphans who live with their aunt and uncle. Rohit is an aspiring singer and works at an automobile showroom to make ends meet. Through his job, he meets Sonia, daughter of rich businessman, Saxena, who is friends with his boss, Malik. They encounter each other several times, one of which is on a cruise ship. When Sonia gets jealous of the female attention Rohit attracts, they drunkenly argue, fall into a lifeboat, and pass out. The boat floats to a deserted island. The two fall in love while stranded there together.

They are rescued by Saxena, but their relationship is rejected, as he does not want his daughter marrying below her financial status. As a result, Rohit loses his job, but Rohit challenges Saxena that he will be successful in order to win Sonia's heart. Rohit's friends help him cut a music record to establish himself so he can be worthy of Sonia. On the eve of his first concert, he goes to pick up Amit from school and inadvertently witnesses the murder of the police commissioner by his boss Malik and two corrupt policemen after the commissioner confronts them about their illegal drug dealings. Malik then calls Saxena, the true leader of this drug cartel, who orders Rohit's death as he is now a witness. The policemen knock him off the bridge into the sea. Rohit, not knowing how to swim, drowns; his body remains on the seafloor and is unable to be recovered.

Sonia, under the belief that Rohit died in an accident, is devastated and falls into depression. Saxena sends her to her cousin's family in New Zealand to give her a change of scenery. There, Sonia is stunned when she encounters a look-alike of Rohit named Raj and thinks that Rohit was somehow saved. Seeing that he is a good singer as well, she initially believes him to be Rohit but is disheartened to learn that he is a New Zealand native and has never visited India. Raj falls in love with Sonia, but she avoids him, as it hurts her to see someone else with Rohit's face.

Raj accompanies Sonia on her return flight to India but accepts her rejection. They bid goodbye at the airport, when suddenly, someone shoots Raj in the arm. He and Sonia flee and realize that someone mistook Raj for Rohit, meaning his death may not have been an accident. They visit Rohit's family and friends, discovering that Amit had become mute since his death. Amit finally speaks upon seeing Raj, and reveals that he witnessed Rohit being chased by his murderers and that his death was ordered by someone Malik called "Sirjee."

Raj, Sonia, and Rohit's friends revive Rohit's concert, announcing that he has returned as a way to draw out his murderers. Raj performs but the plan backfires, as the policemen instead kidnap Sonia. Raj rescues her and kills the policemen, avenging Rohit's death. Saxena kills Malik before Malik can reveal Saxena's involvement. However, when Raj calls 'Sirjee's' number on Malik's phone, Saxena's phone rings, revealing him to be the leader. Saxena apologizes to Sonia and Raj while being arrested. Raj decides to take Amit back with him to New Zealand. Sonia confesses her feelings for him, saying she doesn't want to lose her love again, and goes back with him as well. In the end, Raj and Sonia get engaged.
