As we know that the Microsoft has released its new Operating System known as Windows 11 that is the upgraded and modified version of Windows 10. In the launch event, Microsoft tells people that whoever owns Windows 10 license and are using it is going to get this new version through the regular updates.

This was really an amazing announcement that makes everyone happy since the existing customers don't have to waste more money on this OS. It also includes the people who use KMSpico for activation since it is most likely a legal way and also offers OTA update from Microsoft itself.

But there is a little bit of twist here as this version will only work on the computer having TPM 2.0 enabled and also supports only the 7th generation or higher processor. Once you have had these requirements you are ready to get this update if not then unfortunately you will only receive regular updates.

Is There any windows 11 Activator?

But if you are a new user here and doesn't own it already then you need to purchase the license first. However, we still have the KMSpico as our Windows 11 activator that works like a charm.

Except this, there is another way to get the license without having any tool as some developers manage to create a command prompt file that removes the restriction and provides the full version without paying a penny. I have already tried it on my computer and it works like a charm because it took only a few seconds to grab a license for me.

The file is completely safe to use as it is already been tested by me and using my windows 11 without any issue until now. It is also cannot be traced by the Windows Defender which means we can say it is malware-free as well. That's why you don't need to afraid of anything and just follow the steps provided here.
