Partai gurem is a term used in the world of Indonesian politics to refer to parties with small votes in the general legislative election. Gurem parties have emerged since Soekarno's time when many parties won less than two seats in the 1955 general election, for example the Many People's Consultative Party (Murba), the Association of Police Officers of the Republic of Indonesia (P3RI) and the Panca Sila Defender Movement (GPPS). . This kind of party often appears in a multiparty system that does not set a vote threshold.
