SYNOPSIS: Kabir Rishi, a chartered accountant, and his wife Jyoti reside in Dehradun, Uttarakhand with their kids, Janhvi and Dhruv. On a vacation to their farmhouse at a remote hill station, they meet an enigmatic man, Vanraj Kashyap. Vanraj offers a laddu to Janhvi in exchange of her paratha. After eating the laddu, Janhvi obeys his every command like a puppet. Vanraj again offers a packet of biscuit later to Janhvi when she is in the car and ask her to eat it once she reach farmhouse.

Kabir and his family starts enjoying in the pool of farmhouse. Jyoti puts her wet phone in the rice box for drying and reach at the terrace. She found Vanraj standing at the farmhouse door. Janhvi let Vanraj in and he claims that his phone's battery has died. The family is unsettled by his presence and Jyoti ask Kabir to send Vanraj out of the house. Vanraj starts talking to Janvi about her boyfriend and college. Dhruv asks Janhvi to play with him. Vanraj is disturbed with Dhruv and asks Janhvi to threaten Dhruv on the swing. Janhvi let the swing very high with Dhruv. This threaten Dhruv and he ask for help. Jyoti and Kabir reach there and take Dhruv down the swing. Kabir asks Janhvi to forget the incident but Vanraj interferes. Kabir asks him to leave but Vanraj denies. Kabir tries to kick him out but Janhvi, upon Vanraj's orders, prevents her father from kicking him out. Kabir asks Vanraj what he has done to Janhvi and Vanraj reveals that he has hypnotised her through black magic; she will obey every command he gives. Vanraj orders Janhvi to continuously stand and sit and she follows. Vanraj orders Janhvi to break all the phones, telephone lines and torments the family by dictating Janhvi to do strange and cruel things. Vanraj orders Janhvi to eat dry tea leaves and she does. Kabir stops Janhvi and she slaps her father on the order of Vanraj.

Vanraj asks Kabir and Jyoti to give Janhvi to him, as he needs their permission to do so. When they refuse, Vanraj hits Janhvi and Kabir attacks him. Vanraj orders Janhvi to break the head of Dhruv and she does.

Later, police arrived at the farmhouse as Jyoti calls on the police helpline from the phone in the rice box. Seeing police on the door, Vanraj orders Janhvi to switch on the gas cylinder and sit over it by holding a matchstick. He threatens Kabir and Jyoti that if they tell anything to police, he'll order Janhvi to burn the matchstick and kill herself. The family acts normal with the police and the police finally left.

Kabir offers money in exchange for sparing them. Vanraj agrees and leaves the house but sets the money on fire, declaring that he has no use for materialistic things; he reveals himself to be a demon who aims to control the world, believing himself to be as good as God. He orders Janhvi to continuously slap herself and then orders her to dance for him. Janhvi continued dancing for more than 1 hour. Vanraj orders Janhvi to bring a knife and he then goes to sleep, instructing Janhvi to stab anyone who approaches. When her father tries to steal Vanraj's phone, Janhvi tries to deny him and urinates in her shorts to stop him so she does not have to stab him. Vanraj wakes up and becomes very disappointed at this and as a result he asks her to undress herself and change her clothes.

Having had enough, Jyoti finally snatched the knife from Janhvi and attacked Vanraj. Later Kabir tied Janhvi on the stairs and starts attacking Vanraj. Vanraj orders Janhvi to laugh herself to death and reveals that even if he is killed, Janhvi will continue acting on his last order until her death. This compels Kabir to let him go. Vanraj instructs Janhvi to kill her brother. Kabir and Jyoti tried to stop Janhvi but she locked them in the store room. She started searching for Dhruv and finally found him on the terrace. Kabir and Jyoti break the store room door and try to save Dhruv. Janhvi threw Dhruv from the terrace but he survived her attempt, though grievously wounded.

Realising their children might actually die, Kabir and Jyoti give Vanraj the permission to take Janhvi with him. Vanraj leaves by taking Janhvi with him.

Jyoti drives Dhruv to the hospital while, unbeknownst to Vanraj, Kabir trails him to his lair, having fixed a tracker in his cellphone earlier. It is revealed that Vanraj has kept 108 other girls similarly hypnotised. With Janhvi as the last addition, he prepares to sacrifice them in the fire. He orders all the girls to come closer to the fire on each black doll he throws in the fire. Once he throws the last red doll, all the girls will jump in the fire. This will complete the ritual for him to acquire the power to control anyone as will, as he believes humans do not deserve free will. Kabir tracks Vanraj and reaches there but is attacked by one girl. Vanraj puts his leg on Kabir and is about to finish the ritual. Kabir attacks Vanraj with a fire wood and finally cuts Vanraj's tongue off with the last red doll. Vanraj can't order anything to the girls now and is helpless. When the girls try to kill Kabir, he plays an edited recording of Vanraj's voice, in which he declares their freedom.

Earlier, Kabir had taken the home's security camera recording of Vanraj speaking to Janhvi that his father wanted him to release her. Kabir spliced his words together to make it seem like Vanraj is ordering the girls to go back to normal. Thus, the girls are freed from his control after listening to the recording.

As Kabir and his family recuperate at the hospital, Vanraj's hostages girls are safely returned to their homes by the police who inform Kabir that Vanraj has gone missing.

A year later, Kabir is seen going down into an isolated chamber, where he has, in fact, held Vanraj captive. He mocks Vanraj, who can no longer speak, for wanting power and states that true power comes from parents, who can go to any extent to protect their children. He declares that this is hell now and he is Vanraj's devil. He then tells Vanraj that they will meet again the next day and leaves while Vanraj continues to suffer.
