The Bank of New York Mellon Corporation, doing business as BNY, is an American banking and financial services corporation headquartered in New York City. The bank offers investment management, investment services, and wealth management services. BNY was formed from the merger of The Bank of New York and the Mellon Financial in 2007. Following the merger, it adopted the brand name The Bank of New York Mellon, which was later simplified to BNY Mellon and later again to BNY. It is the world's largest custodian bank and securities services company, with $2 trillion in assets under management and $48.8 trillion in assets under custody as of 2024. It is considered a systemically important bank by the Financial Stability Board.

Through its Bank of New York predecessor, it is the oldest bank in the United States and the first listed on the New York Stock Exchange. It is regarded as being among the oldest banks in the world, having been established in June 1784 by a group that included American Founding Father Alexander Hamilton. T. Mellon and Sons Bank, was founded in Pittsburgh in 1869 by Thomas Mellon and his sons Richard and Andrew, the latter of whom later became Secretary of the US Treasury. The bank replaced its name with Mellon National Bank in 1902.
